"Aw, come on, Jerry. It's too nice a day to stay in the house." Tuffy was staring longingly out across the backyard lawn. But Jerry, who was a little more cautious, didn't think it was wise to go outdoors in broad daylight.

"Listen, Jerry," Tuffy persisted, "nothing can happen to us if we keep in the shadows. We've been outside before and nothing has ever happened to us."

"No, we've only been chased by cats, dogs, owls, big boys, medium-sized boys and little boys. That's all," said Jerry

"Well, nobody has ever caught us, have they?" said Tuffy.

"We've had a couple of close squeaks. We might not be so lucky the next time," said Jerry.

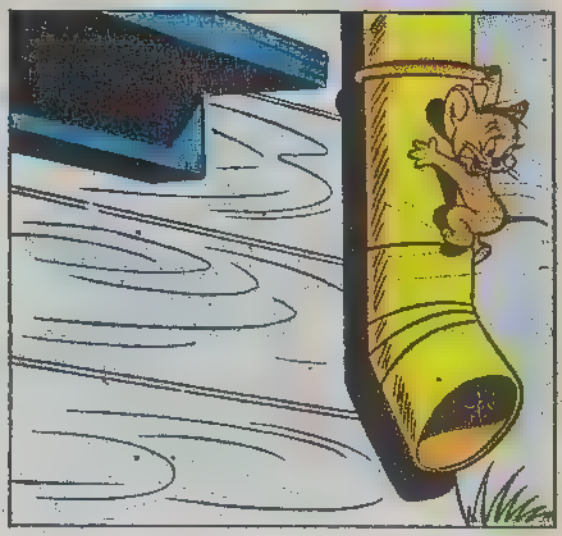
Tuffy didn't say any more, but a short while later Jerry noticed that he had disappeared. The last time Jerry had seen him he was amusing himself by running along the top of a radiator and bouncing into a huge spider web in the corner. The spider wasn't at all amused. Between jumps he darted out of the farthermost part of the corner where he crouched and hastily repaired the damage. Jerry had watched for a while and then wandered away

Now he began to grow alarmed when it seemed Tuffy wasn't anywhere about the house. Jerry even peeked into the kitchen though he was sure Tuffy would not venture alone into Tom Cat's hangout. But Tom wasn't there either. Jerry really began to worry about his friend.

"Tuffy wanted to go outside all morning," said Jerry to himself "I'll bet he sneaked out when I wasn't looking. And—and Tom! Maybe Tom saw him go out and followed him."

Jerry made his way to the open window from which Tuffy viewed the backyard earlier that day. He was sure that if Tuffy did leave the house, he would go out through that window In a few seconds Jerry had scrambled up on the window sill and was anxiously looking out over the lawn for some sign of Tuffy. But the only movement was the gentle bending of the grass where the breeze touched it

"I'll bet he went right through the yard and under the back fence!" thought Jerry. "Of course he wouldn't be satisfied with just staying in the yard."



Jerry then climbed down the outside of the wall and dropped into the grass below. It was no easy matter for him to push his way through the high grass toward the back fence; he had to walk around three unfriendly beetles and remove a sticky caterpillar that had mistaken his arm for a blade of grass. But he finally reached the back fence safely.

Directly before him there was a small opening in the bottom of the fence.

"Ah! I bet he went out that way," said Jerry. "I'll catch up with him pretty soon, and will I give him a piece of my mind."

Jerry poked his head through the hole and quickly drew it back. A large, strange cat was sitting on the other side of the fence. He had seen Jerry's head poke through the hole but he had made no move toward the mouse. In fact, he just sat there and yawned. At first Jerry was relieved that he had seen the cat before he was all the way through the hole, then he began to wonder why the cat seemed to be disinterested in him. Suddenly fear gripped the little mouse; suppose the cat had already eaten Tuffy and didn't feel hungry enough for another mouse?

"I—I've got to find out for sure," cried Jerry. "But how?" There was only one thing to do Jerry decided; he would have to ask.

"Er—I beg your pardon, cat, but did you see a little mouse around here lately?" said Jerry timidly. He cautiously peered through the hole at the strange cat.

The cat yawned again, stretched, and slowly walked away. He didn't even seem to hear Jerry's question. Jerry took a deep breath, stepped through the hole, and with a pounding heart followed behind the strange cat. He was quite certain now that poor Tuffy had met with foul play but he was determined to find out for sure. The cat led him through another yard and then down a long hill to the edge of a lake which Jerry had never seen before. Jerry's heart sank when he saw the cat crouch down and take a long drink; this to him was further proof that the cat had just eaten a very hearty meal.

"I'm gonna find out once an' for all whether or not he ate Tuffy," said Jerry grimly as he walked up to the drinking cat. "Listen, you, did you or didn't you just eat a little mouse back there by the fence, huh?"

The cat turned his head slowly and gazed for a moment at the angry Jerry. Then he sprang. But Jerry was ready for him, and, quick as the cat was, Jerry was quicker. He made a tremendous leap and landed kerplunk in the water three feet away. Then with quick strokes he swam out a few feet further. The cat remained on shore as Jerry knew he would, a cat will do anything but swim for his supper.

Jerry swam to a lily pad a short distance away and climbed onto it. From here he spoke to the cat again: "You might be able to catch LITTLE mice, but you can't catch me, you big lug!"

But the cat didn't answer; he just turned around and walked off yawning. Jerry took a step to the edge of the lily pad and was about to dive in and swim to shore when he saw something that almost made his heart stop beating. Directly underneath the lily pad lay a green-black shape more than twelve inches long. It was a ferocious pickerel, and its wicked eyes were fastened on the mouse above. If Jerry had dove into the water, he would have disappeared into that cruel mouth before he knew it.

The pickerel moved out and lazily circled the lily pad, keeping a watchful eye on the shivering mouse.

"G-Gosh! If I only had wings," squeaked Jerry. "How am I ever gonna get to shore?" Jerry sat down in the very center of the lily pad and tried to think of some way out of his predicament. But he could think of nothing except swimming, and swimming was impossible.

Suddenly there was a gentle plop in the water near by and to Jerry's delight it was a leaf that had fallen from a branch overhead. The current carried it nearer and nearer to the lily pad until Jerry could reach out and grab the stem that curved up like the prow of a little boat. Then Jerry reached in with one leg and carefully tested his weight on the leaf. It sank a little lower in the water but it seemed that it would hold him all right. He took a deep breath and stepped in, at the same time pushing himself away from the lily pad.

The little leaf-boat was dangerously low in the water, and as Jerry peered over the side he would see the dark shape floating patiently below. Then he noticed that the current was carrying the leaf farther away from shore and out toward the center of the lake. He knew he could easily paddle to shore with his hands, but he also knew if he so much as stuck a finger in the water the watchful fish would leap. He would just have to sit tight and hope the current would carry him to safety in some other part of the lake.

So intently was Jerry watching the huge fish below him, and measuring the distance to the shore, that he wasn't aware he was being carried closer and closer to a waterfall at the far end of the lake. Looking down at the huge fish, he was overjoyed to see the water getting shallower and shallower, and pretty soon the pickerel turned around and swam back into deeper water.

"Whew! That was a close one," Jerry mumbled to himself. "I—."

He didn't get any further. The next thing he knew he was pitched head over heels out into space. Down, down, he went, and finally after what seemed like a lifetime, plunged into a pool of bubbling, raging water. He quickly popped to the surface and desperately struck out for shore. But the current being too strong for him, he wisely relaxed and let himself be carried along, hoping that he would be washed ashore before he drowned.

Sure enough he was finally thrown up on shore, and, thoroughly exhausted, he dragged himself away from the water's edge Then he lay down under a rock and fell sound asleep as soon as his head touched the ground.

He dreamed that his old pal, Tuffy, was caught by a strange cat and he, Jerry, couldn't do anything to help him. He just helplessly cried and cried and—

"Hey! Wake up! Jerry!"

"Huh? Who? Wha—?" Jerry sat up rubbing his eyes

"Jerry! At last I found you!" It was Tuffy, and he was alive as ever. "I've been looking all over for you. Why did you leave the house this morning without me?"

"I—I was looking for YOU!" cried Jerry. "I thought YOU left the house and were eaten by a cat!"

"Gosh, that's what I thought about YOU!" shouted Tuffy. "I even talked to a cat who said the last time he saw you, you were floating on a leaf in the lake. But I didn't believe such an unlikely tale."

"Say, how did you get that cat to TALK to you?" cried Jerry. "I tried but he just wouldn't answer me."

"Oh, I promised I'd tell him where he could get all the milk he wanted," chuckled Tuffy.

"And—?" prompted Jerry suspiciously.

"And when he told me where he saw you and then asked me where all the milk was, I asked him if he knew how to milk milkweeds."

"I'll bet he was pretty sore," laughed Jerry.

"Sore? Why, he chased me almost all the way down here. That's how I found you."

"Well, we'll have to take a different route home," said Jerry. "We don't want to bump into him again."

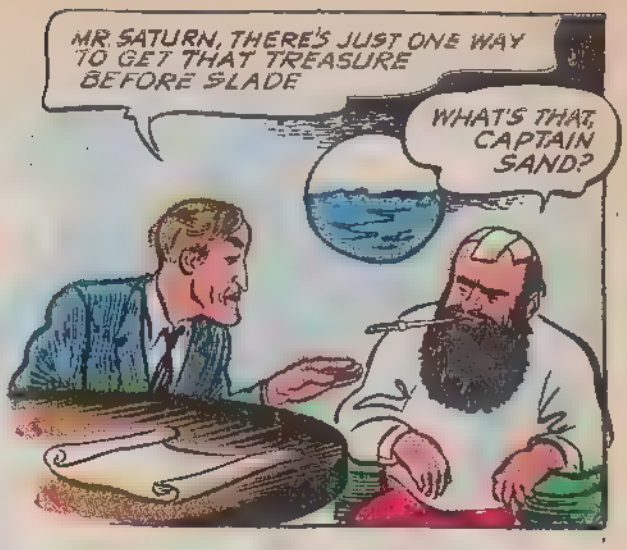
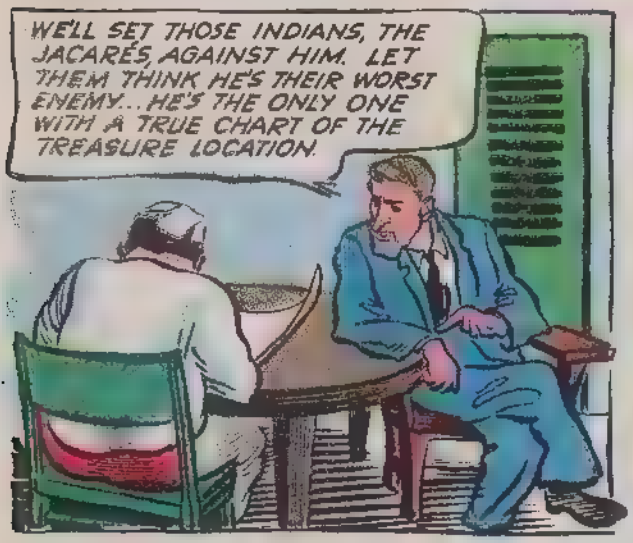
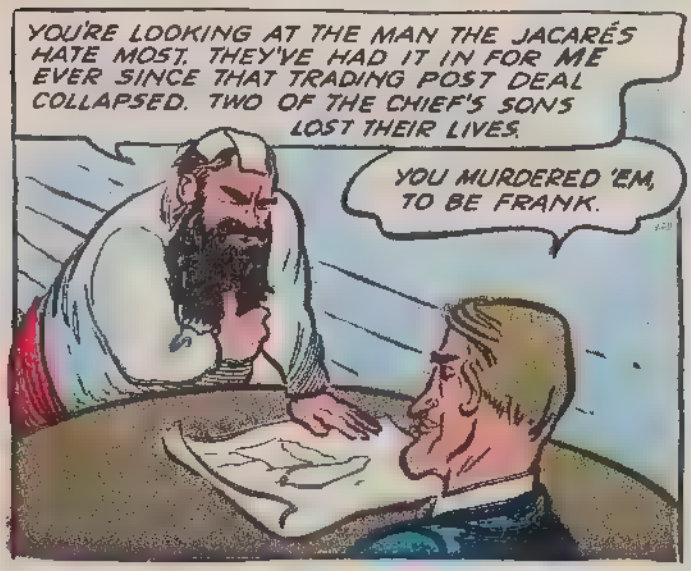
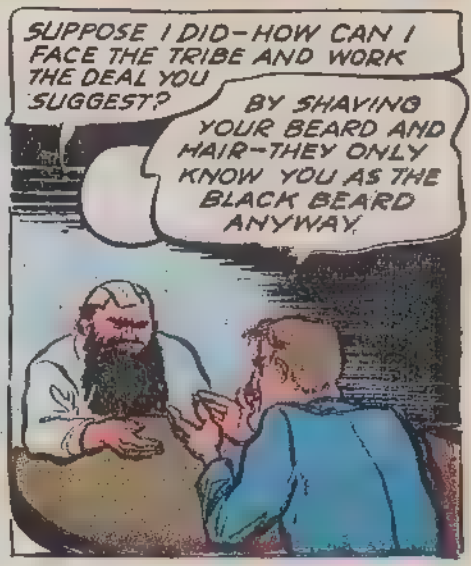
OUR GANG

BLACK BEARDED MR. SATURN, ON HIS YACHT, AND HAPPY SLADE, ABOARD HIS TUGBOAT, ARE RACING TO THE SPERANTO RIVER ON A TREASURE HUNT.
RED, EGGHEAD, AND TWO-BY-TWO ARE WITH HAPPY SLADE.

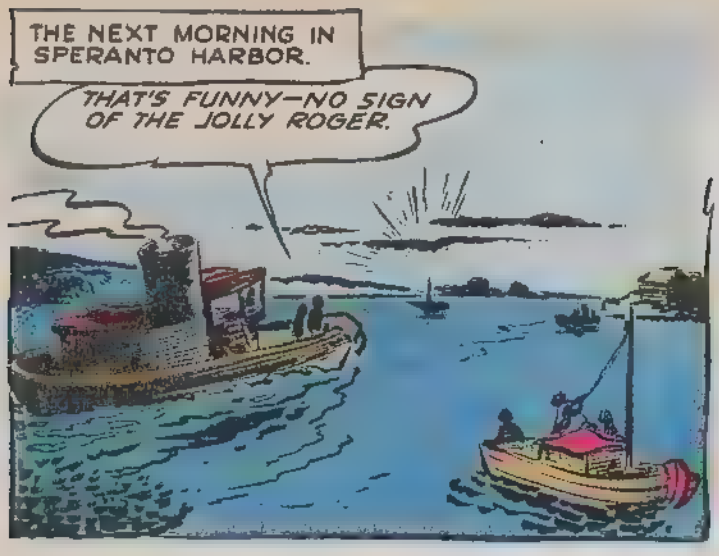






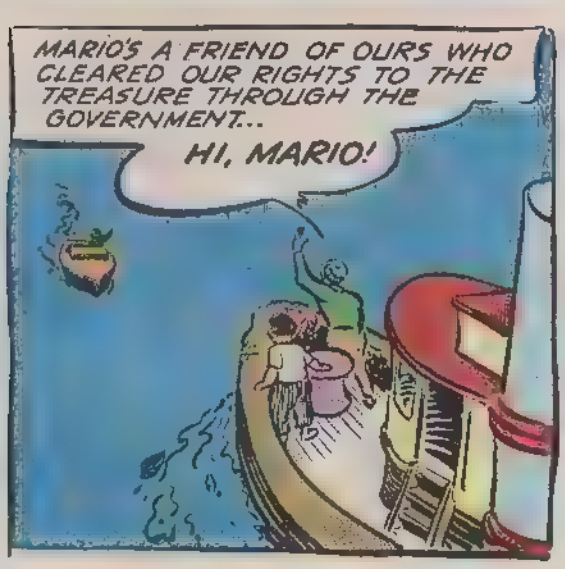


ALL RIGHT, SUPPOSE I SACRIFICE MY BEARD. HOW'S THAT GOING TO MAKE THEM MAD AT HAPPY?
TELL THE TRIBE THAT HAPPY IS YOU AND THAT HE SHAVED OFF HIS BEARD TO ESCAPE DETECTION.
ARE YOU INSANE? I'D SUSPECT THAT STORY RIGHT AWAY.
YOU WOULD BUT THOSE JACARÉS WON'T.
MAYBE IT WOULD WORK— THOSE INDIANS ARE PRETTY SIMPLE-MINDED, AND IF THE OLD CHIEF IS DEAD, THERE'D BE NOBODY AROUND WHO EVER HAD SEEN ME.
NATURALLY! THE TRIBE WOULD JUST HAVE A LEGEND TO GO BY—AND WE CAN MAKE SURE THE CHIEF IS DEAD BEFORE WE START TALKING—GET ME?
YEAH—POOR OLD BEARD!
TELL CAP'N SAND WE'LL BE IN SPERANTO HARBOR IN TWO HOURS.
ABOARD HAPPY SLADE'S TUG...
HOW LONG BEFORE WE REACH SPERANTO, CAP'N HAPPY?
WE'RE DUE THERE TOMORROW, RED. THE MARY SLADE IS SLOW BUT STEADY.

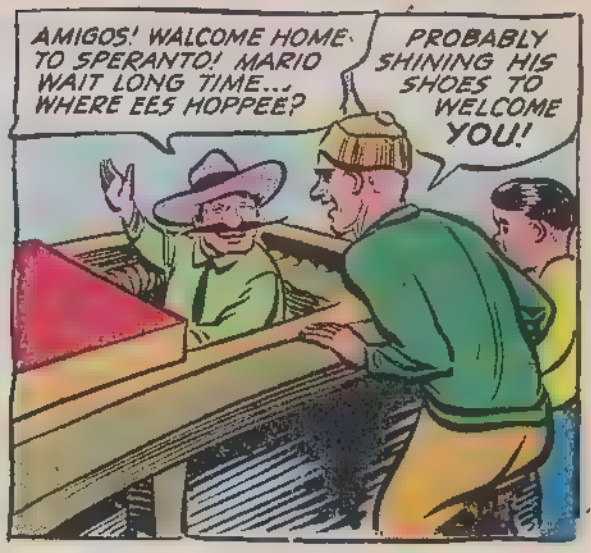


THE NEXT MORNING IN SPERANTO HARBOR.
THAT'S FUNNY—NO SIGN OF THE JOLLY ROGER.

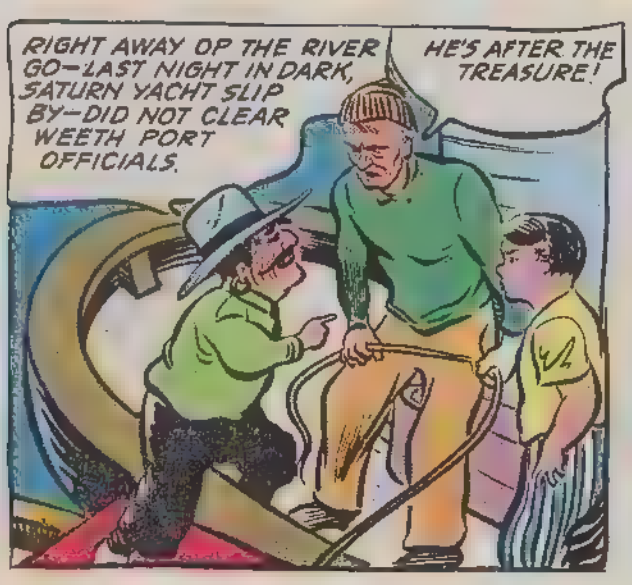
LOOKS LIKE MARIO'S BOAT COMING OUT TO MEET US.
WHO'S MARIO?



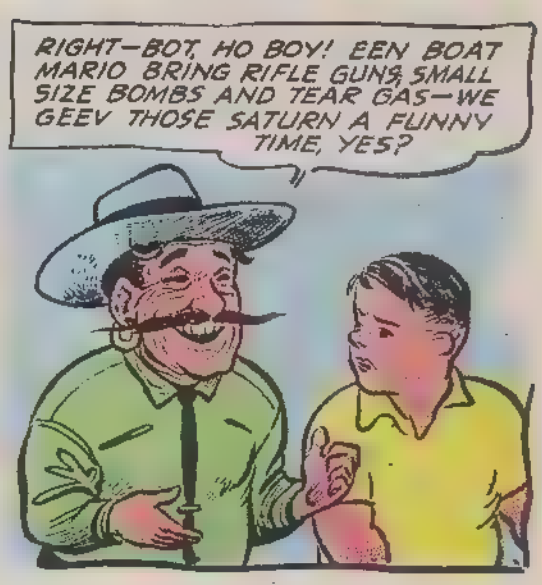
MARIO'S A FRIEND OF OURS WHO CLEARED OUR RIGHTS TO THE TREASURE THROUGH THE GOVERNMENT...
HI, MARIO!



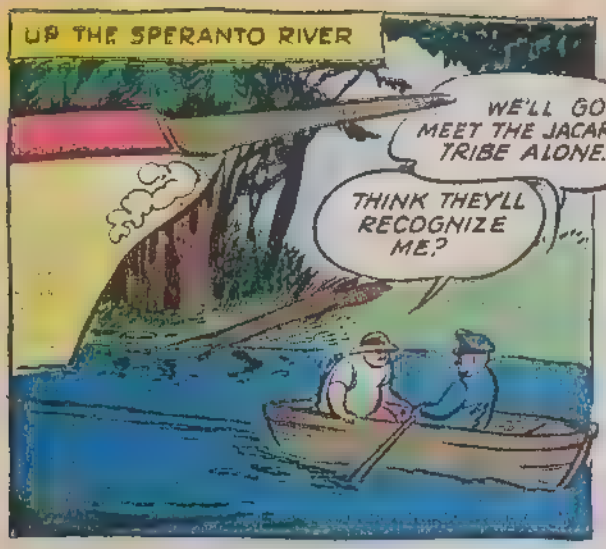
AMIGOS! WALCOME HOME TO SPERANTO! MARIO WAIT LONG TIME... WHERE EES HOPPEE?
PROBABLY SHINING HIS SHOES TO WELCOME YOU!



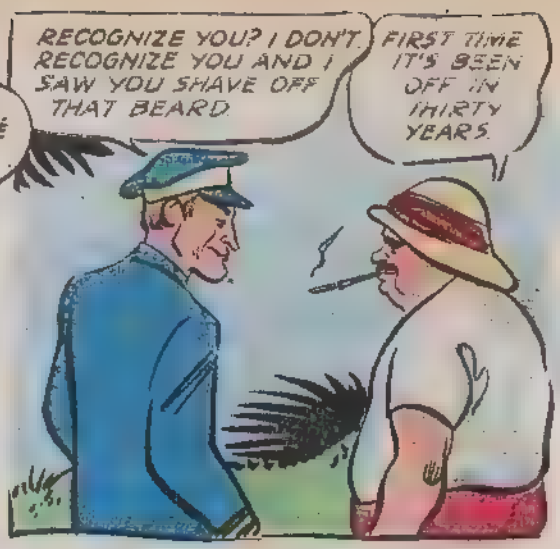
RIGHT AWAY OP THE RIVER GO—LAST NIGHT IN DARK, SATURN YACHT SLIP BY—DID NOT CLEAR WEETH PORT OFFICIALS.
HE'S AFTER THE TREASURE!



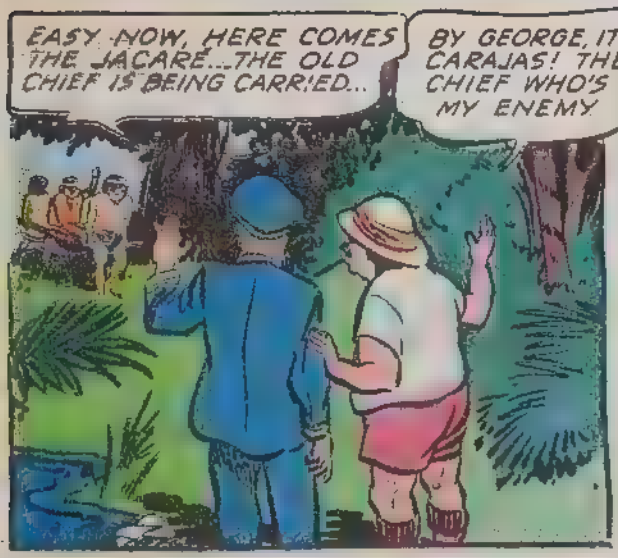
RIGHT—BOT, HO BOY! EEN BOAT MARIO BRING RIFLE GUNS, SMALL SIZE BOMBS AND TEAR GAS—WE GEEV THOSE SATURN A FUNNY TIME, YES?



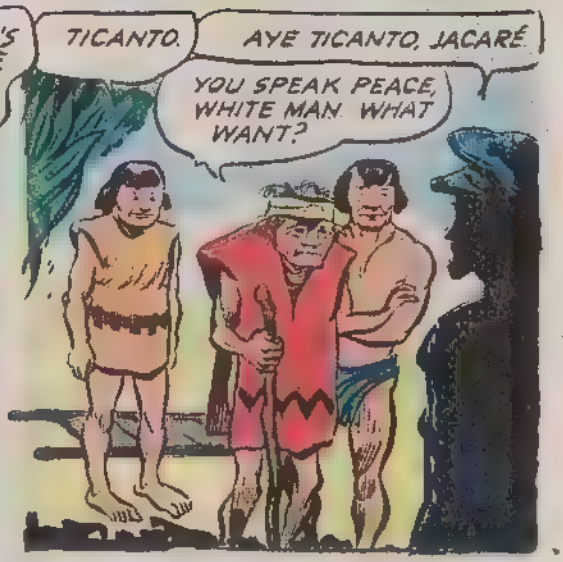
UP THE SPERANTO RIVER
WE'LL GO MEET THE JACARÉ TRIBE ALONE...
THINK THEY'LL RECOGNIZE ME?



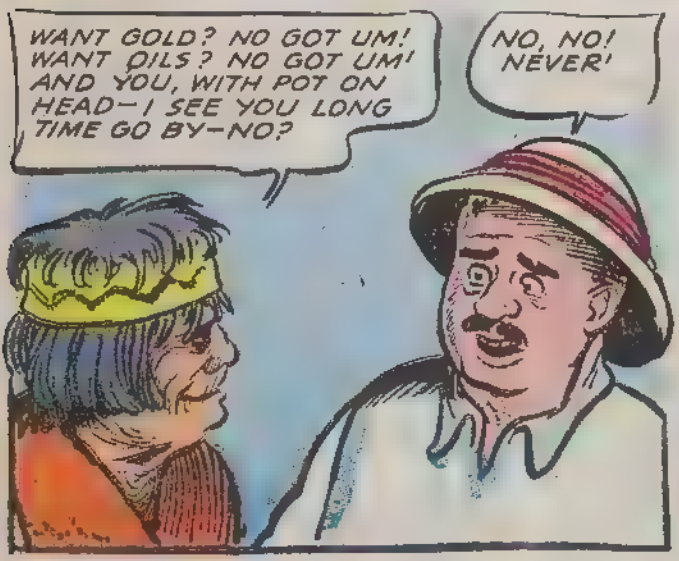
RECOGNIZE YOU? I DON'T RECOGNIZE YOU AND I SAW YOU SHAVE OFF THAT BEARD.
FIRST TIME IT'S BEEN OFF IN THIRTY YEARS.



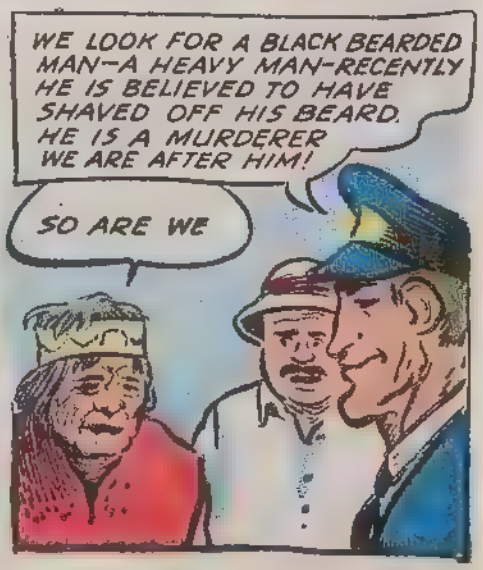
EASY NOW, HERE COMES THE JACARÉ...THE OLD CHIEF IS BEING CARRIED...
BY GEORGE, IT'S CARAJAS! THE CHIEF WHO'S MY ENEMY



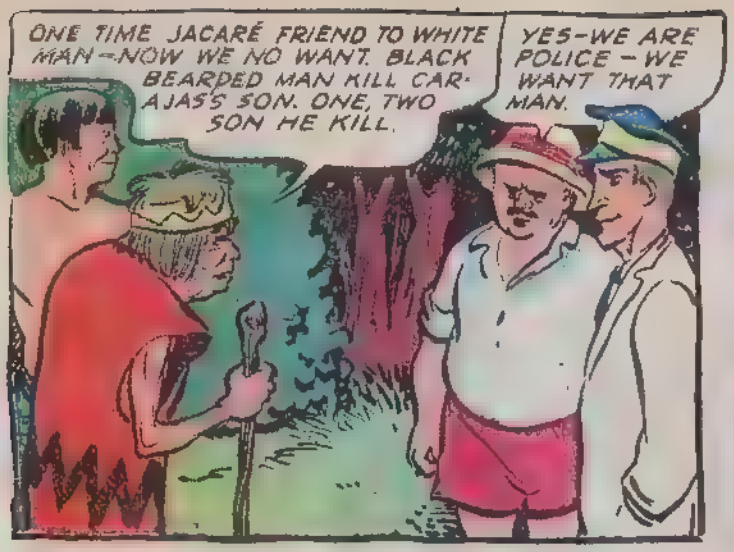
TICANTO.
AYE TICANTO, JACARÉ.
YOU SPEAK PEACE, WHITE MAN. WHAT WANT?



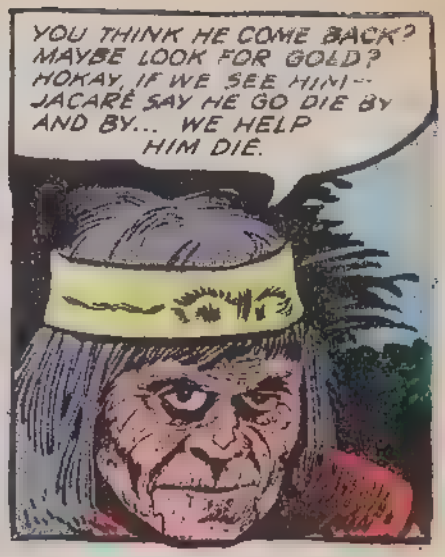
WANT GOLD? NO GOT UM! WANT OILS? NO GOT UM! AND YOU, WITH POT ON HEAD—I SEE YOU LONG TIME GO BY—NO?
NO, NO! NEVER!



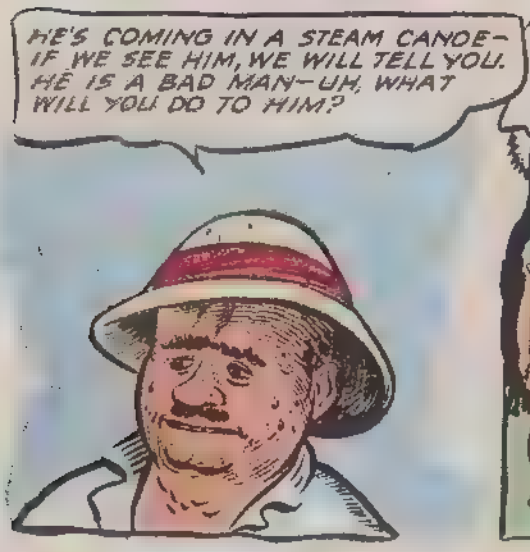
WE LOOK FOR A BLACK BEARDED MAN—A HEAVY MAN—RECENTLY HE IS BELIEVED TO HAVE SHAVED OFF HIS BEARD. HE IS A MURDERER WE ARE AFTER HIM!
SO ARE WE



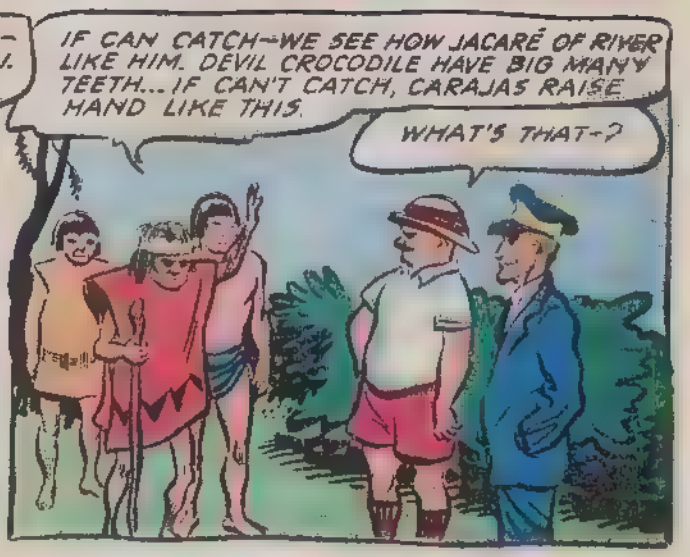
ONE TIME JACARÉ FRIEND TO WHITE MAN—NOW WE NO WANT. BLACK BEARDED MAN KILL CARAJAS'S SON. ONE, TWO SON HE KILL.
YES—WE ARE POLICE—WE WANT THAT MAN.



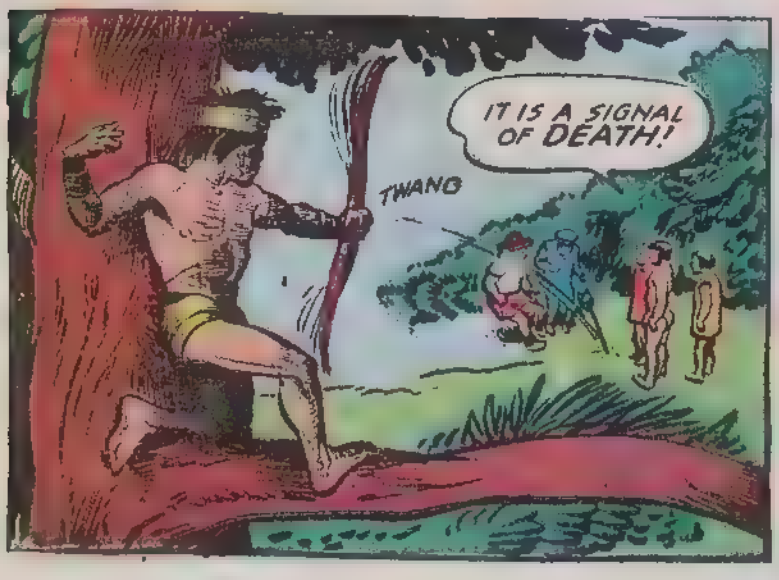
YOU THINK HE COME BACK? MAYBE LOOK FOR GOLD? HOKAY, IF WE SEE HIM—JACARÉ SAY HE GO DIE BY AND BY... WE HELP HIM DIE.



HE'S COMING IN A STEAM CANOE—IF WE SEE HIM, WE WILL TELL YOU. HE IS A BAD MAN—UH, WHAT WILL YOU DO TO HIM?

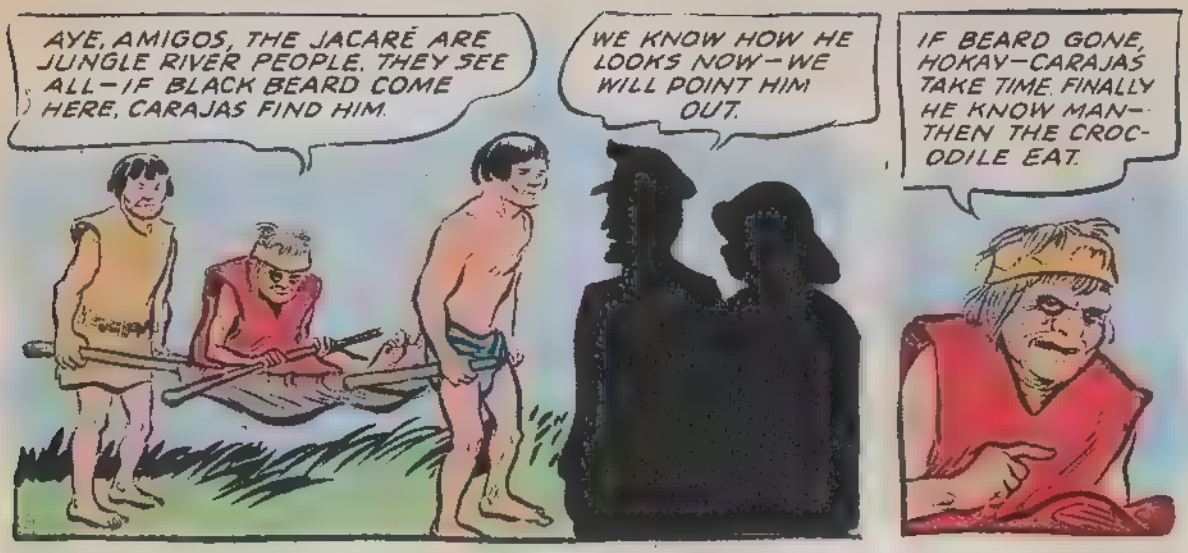


IF CAN CATCH—WE SEE HOW JACARÉ OF RIVER LIKE HIM. DEVIL CROCODILE HAVE BIG MANY TEETH... IF CAN'T CATCH, CARAJAS RAISE HAND LIKE THIS.
WHAT'S THAT—?

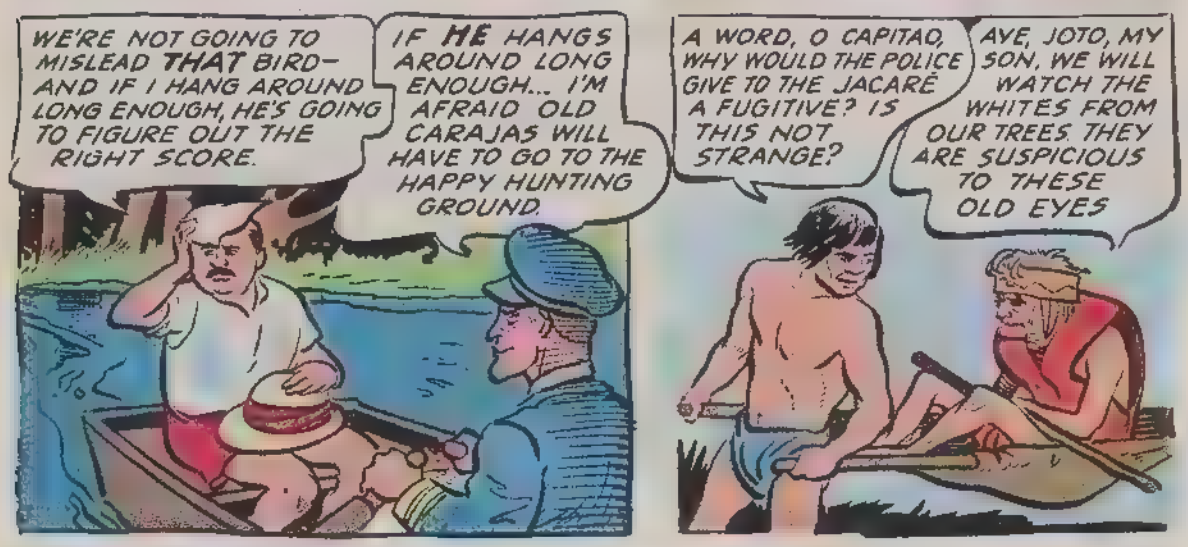


IT IS A SIGNAL OF DEATH!
THWANG

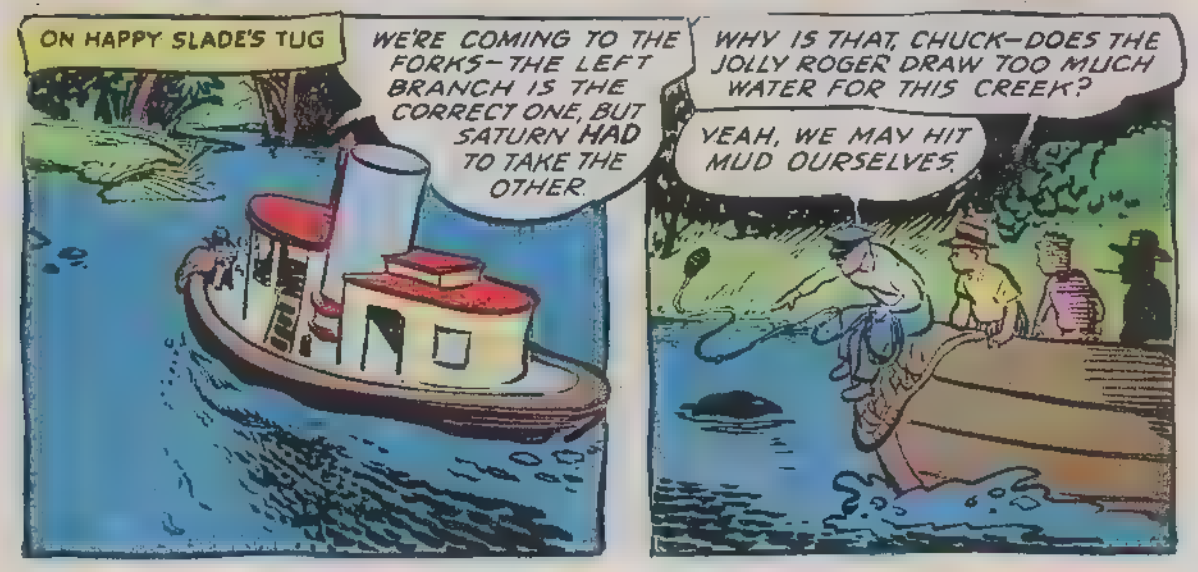
BOWMEN! IN EVERY TREE!



AYE, AMIGOS, THE JACARÉ ARE JUNGLE RIVER PEOPLE. THEY SEE ALL—IF BLACK BEARD COME HERE, CARAJAS FIND HIM.
WE KNOW HOW HE LOOKS NOW—WE WILL POINT HIM OUT.
IF BEARD GONE, HOKAY—CARAJAS TAKE TIME. FINALLY HE KNOW MAN—THEN THE CROCODILE EAT.

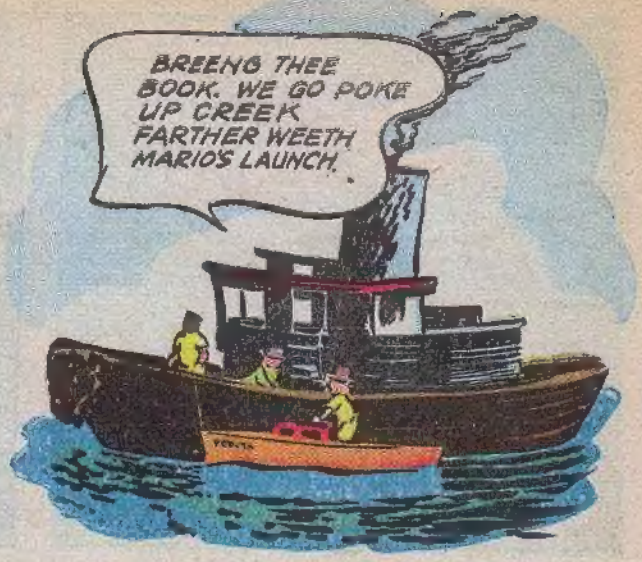


WE'RE NOT GOING TO MISLEAD THAT BIRD—AND IF I HANG AROUND LONG ENOUGH, HE'S GOING TO FIGURE OUT THE RIGHT SCORE.
IF HE HANGS AROUND LONG ENOUGH... I'M AFRAID OLD CARAJAS WILL HAVE TO GO TO THE HAPPY HUNTING GROUND.
A WORD, O CAPITAO, WHY WOULD THE POLICE GIVE TO THE JACARÉ A FUGITIVE? IS THIS NOT STRANGE?
AYE, JOTO, MY SON, WE WILL WATCH THE WHITES FROM OUR TREES. THEY ARE SUSPICIOUS TO THESE OLD EYES



ON HAPPY SLADE'S TUG
WE'RE COMING TO THE FORKS—THE LEFT BRANCH IS THE CORRECT ONE, BUT SATURN HAD TO TAKE THE OTHER.
WHY IS THAT, CHUCK—DOES THE JOLLY ROGER DRAW TOO MUCH WATER FOR THIS CREEK?
YEAH, WE MAY HIT MUD OURSELVES.

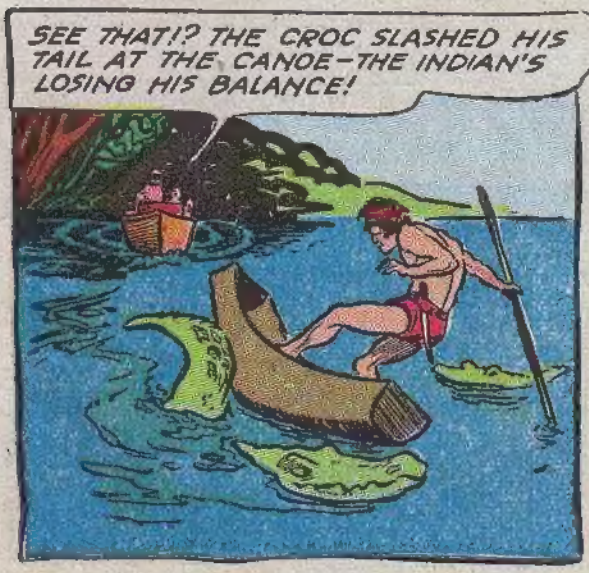
UH-OH—PLENTY OF MUD THIS YEAR... SING OUT TO HAPPY TO STOP—NO USE TAKIN' CHANCES.



BREENG THEE BOOK. WE GO POKE UP CREEK FARTHER WEETH MARIO'S LAUNCH.

SEE, MARIO, THE MAP INSIDE THE COVER HAPPENS TO CORRESPOND ROUGHLY TO THIS SECTION—EVEN THOUGH IT IS OF A FICTITIOUS ISLAND.
WE'LL SEE SWAMP ISLAND UP HERE ABOUT A MILE—THE TREASURE'S IN THERE.

LOOK—AN INDIAN IN A CANOE! HE'S WATCHING US AND DOESN'T SEE THOSE TWO CROCODILES.



SEE THAT!? THE CROC SLASHED HIS TAIL AT THE CANOE—THE INDIAN'S LOSING HIS BALANCE!

HE'S DONE FOR UNLESS WE DO SOMETHING—GIVE THE PEPITA THE GAS, MARIO!
